Consumers have welcomed new ideas for using specialty dairy foods such as non-fat dry milk, cottage cheese, sour cream, chocolate milk and buttermilk. That's why consumption of these and other dairy specialties has climbed as much as 25% in the last few years.

Dairy scientists say rations for dairy heifers being kept for replacements should consist mostly of forage. Do not feed more than four pounds of grain per day. After six months of age, heifers do not require grain.

Agriculture of the 1960's is a new agriculture, says Russell B Dickerson, associate dean of the College of Agriculture at Penn State, and thousands of jobs are open for agriculture college graduates in research, public relations, management, production, communications, sales, processing, engineering and foreign service.
Penn State ranks third in the nation with its enrollment of more than 1,500 undergraduates and more than 300 graduates preparing for the unlimited opportunities in the dynamic agriculture industry.
