Light-use rugs are usually designed for temporary use and for rooms used occasionally, such as guest rooms and some bedrooms, explains Sanna Black, Penn State extension home management specialist. Room-size or area rugs that can be turned to equalize wear are recommended for these areas instead of wall-to-wall carpeting. Light-use rugs are usually lower in price than standard-or-medium-use rugs.

FEED SILAGE

Feed silage to brood sows to cut winter feed costs, suggests Dwight E. Younkin, extension livestock specialist at Penn State. He says grass or corn silage can save 2 to 2½ pounds of grain per day per sow during the gestation period. Feed silage in troughs with grain protein mixture distributed over it
