BEST FOOD BUYS Spring Prices Have Not Arrived

Spring has arrived according to the calendar, but you'd never know it if you were judging by the prices of fresh produce at your local food-market. Many vegetables are in short supply this week, with prices reaching highest levels of the year reports Tom Piper, Penn State Extension Marketing Agent. Shortages are the result of succeeding waves of bad weather in all principal winter producing States.

Celery prices are the highest in several years. Cabbage shipments have been very light and sharp price advances have occurred for both old and new iceberg, lettuce, broccoli, cauliflower, sweet corn and cucumbers are in light supply and higher in price.

Good buys in fresh vegetables are limited to potatoes, green beans, leafy greens, peppers, radishes, mushrooms and sweet potatoes.

Grapfruit, oranges, and Stayman and Rome apple varieties remain in plentiful supply with reasonable prices. The strawberry season is gradually getting underway, shipments are arriving from Florida, Louisiana and California, but a careful selection should be made because quality is unpredictable. Banana prices are high due to shortage of supplies.

Imported fruit is an important factor in supplying our needs at this season of the year. Pears, grapes, peaches, plums and nectarines arriving from Argentina, Chile and other South American countries provide you with these fresh fruits during our off-season. Prices are reasonable on these items, considering the transportation and handling charges involved.

Frozen turkeys, still in large supply and priced as much as 18 per cent below a year ago, will share the good value position with trims, chicken and a variety of pork items this week-end. Pork roasts, hams and fresh picnic, beef, chuck roasts and lamb will be featured at attractive prices in many stores. Eggs and dairy products are economical protein suppliers too.

Tree-Ripened Fruit

To the experienced food shopper, tree-ripened generally means some extra special quality that makes for a better, tastier fruit. Catherine Love, Penn State extension consumer economics specialist, explains that grapefruit is always marketed as tree-ripened. Unlike such other fruits as pears or bananas, grapefruit won't ripen after harvest. That's why it must be kept on the trees until the peak of quality is reached.

Plan your early vegetable garden now. You can plant peas as early as you can work the ground. Don't hurry planting warm season crops such as corn since they are likely to freeze out.

THE FAST, EASY WAY TO MAKE GRAIN PAY!

You can spread URAN® Nitrogen on many acres per day and supply your small grain with all the low-cost nitrogen needed to make it green up and grow fast for big yields. You save labor as well as time with ARCADIAN® URAN Nitrogen Fertilizer Solution. Pumps and machinery do the work of handling this non-pressure Nitrogen Solution.

You have no bags to carry, no high-pressure equipment to handle. Whether you spread URAN Nitrogen yourself, or have your ARCADIAN dealer spread it for you, you get quick-acting, long-lasting nitrogen fast and easy, at low cost. Use URAN Nitrogen to make all your small grains grow big yields. Use it for pastures, too.
