Farm Prices Rise Slightly During Month

Prices received by Pennsylvania farmers for their agricultural products during the month ending September 15 increased four per cent from a month earlier. The price level was five per cent above the same period last year and was at the highest level since February 1961, according to figures released this week by the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The increases during the period were mainly the result of higher prices received for livestock prices. Leading the increase in livestock prices were milk and eggs. Increases over last year were caused by higher prices for most crops plus slightly higher prices for livestock and livestock products.

The index of prices received, which is the barometer of farm business and indicates the trend of changes in prices farmers receive, stood at 235 per cent of the base (1910-14 = 100). The index of the previous month was 226 compared with 223 for the month last year.

The index of prices received for crops held steady over the month, but was 13 per cent above a year ago. Over the past month increases in prices of corn and hay were balanced by decreases in potato, wheat and most vegetable prices. The large upswing over 1961 September prices was the result of a general advance for most crops. The one exception was a decline in tobacco prices.
