

● Egg Washing

washed on the farm. "I was really surprised," Thome said "We took some dirty eggs over and ran them through. They really came out clean."

Top price for his eggs was just about the same as it was before he changed processors, but the overall grade was a little better with the plant washing.

I don't know if the difference in average price will pay for the half cent a dozen it costs for washing or not I probably won't have any more money for the eggs at the end of the year, but if I can make use of the time I save, it will be a real economy, Thome said.

I will know better in a couple more weeks, just how much it (in-plant washing) is worth, he said, but added he would not like to go back to washing his eggs on the farm.

In many large families, mother spends many more hours than necessary just "picking up" after youngsters who are too young or too careless about their clothing.

Youngsters have the excuse that they are unable to "hang up" their clothes without standing on a chair. If your closet has a high ceiling, this problem can be eliminated by installing a lower hanging rod at a level easily reached by younger children.

In a community wardrobe, for instance, older children may hang their garments on the upper rod, leaving the lower rod for the small fry.

Small fry like to be able to do

"grown up" things for themselves, and they like to have something of their very own, even a place to keep their own clothing.

And, as every housekeeper knows, proper training now means easier workdays ahead for mother.

Overheating Of Tractor Causes Outlined

Most tractor owners don't normally consider overheating a problem in tractor operation; they are usually concerned with underheating.

However, engineers from a national spark plug company advise that overheating, evidenced by repaid boiling away of the cooling water, poor engine performance in the form of powder loss or knocking, also can result in serious damage to the tractor engine.

The engineers advise that the spark plugs in your tractor also can provide a good clue to this condition, inasmuch as continual overheating will be indicated by severe burning or blistering on the firing ends of the porcelain insulator.

Following is a list of some of the more common culprits that contribute to overheating. 1. Use of inferior fuel, 2. Faulty water pump; 3. Lime deposits in the cooling system; 4. Defective hose connections; 5. Improper timing to a weak magneto, 6. Pulling too heavy a load, 7. Hot weather operation with lower part of the radiator covered, 8. Plugged radiator fins; 9. Loose or badly worn fan belts, 10. Too lean a fuel mixture, 11. Dirty radiator.

Poison Alert

Parents have the responsibility of keeping poisons locked up and out of reach of young children, believes Mrs. Marguerite L. Duvall, Penn State family life extension specialist. Accidental poisonings are increasing because of more and more potentially poisonous household products on the market. Preschool children are the greatest victims since it's natural for young children to put everything they find in their mouths.

Farm Women Favor More Jr. Colleges

Farm Women Societies in this area are giving approval to a set of resolutions drawn up by the State Society and sent to the Governor of Pennsylvania and the members of the legislature.

The resolutions cover education, drunken driving penalties and conservation.

The organization favors more junior colleges in order to help more students of promising ability to continue in the education field. It calls for more severe penalties for driving while under the influence of liquor. The resolutions also ask that all junk car lots along the highways be removed on the grounds they are "eyesores to the natural beauty of our state."

The group also pointed out that spray material is being used to control weed and shrubbery along the highways, and asked that extreme care be used to save wild flowers and that the growth killed by spraying be removed.
