

Horace Mann Is Farm Show Head

HARRISBURG — Horace L. Mann who for nearly twenty years has been an exhibitor or assistant at the Pennsylvania Farm Show today became its director. His appointment was announced by Leland H. Bull, State Secretary of Agriculture.

Mann, 35, will receive $11,501 a year. He succeeds John B. McCool, director for the past eight years who retired

July 1 with 41 years of public service in Pennsylvania agriculture.

A native of Clearfield, Mann first came to the show while still in high school as dairy cattle exhibitor for W. A. E. Leitzinger, Clearfield.

Later, he assisted with the show as a staff member of the Pennsylvania State University, and in recent years was a commercial exhibitor.

He graduated from Clearfield High School, earned a degree in animal science at Penn State, and for six years

Atomic Plant Opens Its Doors

An Atomic Center is now open to the public at the site of the world's first high temperature atomic power station at Peach Bottom. Visitors may tour the Center, Wednesdays through Sundays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The 600-acre plant site is in York County on the west bank of the Susquehanna was with the university as assistant county agent in Lackawanna and Wyoming counties, and as extension dairy specialist.

River.

The Center sits on a hillside overlooking the atomic power station which is now approximately 45 per cent completed. It is expected to be ready for operation next year.

The Peach Bottom plant represents the first industrial application of a new and advanced concept — high temperature and high pressure — in nuclear power generation. The plant will be owned and operated by Philadelphia Electric Company on whose system it is located. Pennsylvania Power & Light Company is one of 53 utilities supporting the developmental construction of the plant.

The Atomic Information Center is a one-story modern building of striking design, featuring a 44-foot circular exhibit area with glass walls half-way around the perimeter and a domed roof. Animated exhibits are grouped in the Center in story units, complete in themselves, but with continuity so that visitors receive basic information on the atom and an understanding of the role atomic power plants have in the generation of electricity. Adjoining the exhibit area are a lobby, women's lounge, utility rooms, an auditorium for showing motion pictures and slides and for lecture periods, and an outdoor observation deck.
