FRUIT STAINS NEED PROMPT ATTENTION

Promptness in removing fruit or grass stains can save time, energy, and money. Many stains are easy to remove when fresh, but hard or impossible to remove later, especially if set by heat.

A stain removal method should be geared to both the fabric and stain. Before using a stain remover, decide if the stain is greasy, nongreasy, or a combination, and if fabric is washable or nonwashable. To find out if the stain remover will change the appearance of a fabric, test it first on a seam allowance, hem, inside of a pocket, or tail of a blouse or shirt.

To remove a fruit stain from a washable fabric, wash the stained area with a synthetic detergent, then rinse. If stain remains, use a bleach if safe for the fabric. Some fruit stains may be removed with boiling water poured from a height of 1 to 3 feet through the stain. Before using hot water treatment, make sure it won't affect the fabric or color. On a nonwashable fabric, sponge the stain with cold water first. If necessary, apply a liquid synthetic detergent to the stain, then rinse stained area only.

For a grass stain on a washable fabric, rinse stained area with cold water then rub in synthetic detergent and wash. Bleach last traces of stain with hydrogen peroxide. On a nonwashable fabric, use the same procedure if color will withstand the treatment. If garment must be drycleaned, identify the stain for the dry-cleaning cleaner.
