News Reporting
Course Offered
By Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. — Everybody wants to be a better reporter of news. At least it seems that way to The Pennsylvania State University correspondence course office, because more than 7,000 have taken their course in news writing by mail.

News Writing, a course of ten lessons, was prepared primarily for those who report activities of their schools, clubs, churches, and organizations to weekly and daily newspapers. Some editors have also used the course to instruct their staff members and correspondents.

Included in the course are lessons on editing copy, newspaper style, taking accurate notes, basic English grammar, etc. It also has a glossary of terms used in the newspaper profession. Author of the course is Harold Fox, veteran newspaper editor and farm news writer, now Extension Press Editor at Penn State.

Anyone can get the complete course, including postage, and expert correction and grading of lesson papers by sending $2 50 to Correspondence Courses, Agricultural Education Building, The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, Pa.

youths will be taking part as follows: FFA poultry judging — Robert Horning, Schuylkill Haven; Andrew Baker, Maricon; Cynthia Bucher, Litzitz; Center, and Garry Maurer, Virginia Wivell, Columbia, and John Schwartz, Littlestown.

4-H poultry demonstrations — Gary Porter, Washington Boro; Kenneth Hess, Manheim, and Robert Henry, New Providence.

4-H egg judging — Porter and Albert Henry, New Providence.

The youth contestants will compete Oct. 8. Awards will be presented that night at a banquet in their honor.

More than 5,000 poultrymen and their families in the 14-state Northeast area are expected to attend the exposition.
