CALVES SHOW THE CHARACTERISTIC black and white markings of the Belted Galloways. George Knight tries to tempt them with a bucket of feed so the photographer can get a quick shot from atop the fence.

ness, Saltonstall says He recalled seeing a calf dropped in a howling Maine blizzard with no shelter In a few minutes the calf was up and nursing even though it was coated with ice The calf survived and thrived Cows on the New Danville farm have access to the barn, but this week they were standing out in the snow storm and appeared to be contented

Saltonstall winters the cows on hay alone, but he said he would probably feed some grain if the hay were not high quality The cows seem to do well on rough feed He said they even seem to prefer the rougher pasture and seek out coarser grass when good pastures are available

The origin of the breed seems to be lost in the dim past, but Belties are more popular in Scotland than anywhere else Most of the characteristics are the same as the black or dun Galloways (except for the white belt), but the cattle can not be cross-registered

While no one knows for sure where the Belties came from, it seems likely that their ancestry includes blood of the Lakenvelders, a belted dairy breed from Holland and the more common black or dun Scottish Galloways.

food labels will work for you The label contains valuable information the law requires for your protection, such as net contents in terms of weight or liquid measure The label also tells you what's inside the package and, with canned fruits and vegetables, how the food is packed, such as whole kernel or cream style corn.

Mending Tip

To repair tears under buttons, try reinforcing and mending the area under the button with iron-on interfacing of a suitable weight and color for the garment Then sew the button on again, drawing thread through the fabric and interfacing.

Reminders For Holiday Decorating

Feel free to allow yourself to indulge in fun as you decorate for the holidays. If you need ideas, look in current magazines and stores, then choose or adapt ideas that suit your home.

Think about the size of the area you plan to decorate. If it's a large space, don't use too many small objects because they add a cluttered effect to a large area.

Think about how many decorations a room can stand, then limit your decorations to one or two ideas that are really meaningful

Consider the total effect of decorations Are they right for your home? Are they comfortable for the family? You may need to store some accessories used other times of the year to make room for the holiday decorations

When you labor patiently over a bouquet of greenery for the front hall or tie and decorate packages, you share with others your joy and satisfaction of creativity.

Retired couples like contemporary furniture because of its easy maintenance and lack of space and storage problems, report Penn State extension home management specialists. The trend toward converting vacation houses into retirement homes also contributes to the contemporary spirit in decorating
