Production Of Peaches Up Over Last Year

Peach production this year in Pennsylvania was estimated today by the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service at 3,000,000 bushels.

This compares with a small crop last year of 2,000,000 bushels and a five-year (1958-62) average of 2,720,000 bushels.

Trees of all fruit species came through the winter in good shape. Bloom was profuse. Except for a few areas where weather was cool and damp during full bloom there was a fine set of fruit.

Apple prospects look good, although York, Red Delicious, Golden Delicious and Stayman, four of the five major varieties in Pennsylvania, have a lighter set than most other varieties.

The Pennsylvania sour cherry crop apparently will be quite large.

Production of sweet cherries is now estimated at 1,200 tons—the best crop since 1955. Last year the crop of 350 tons was the smallest of record. The five-year (1958-62) average is 960 tons.

The 130,000 bushel 1964 pear crop now expected in Pennsylvania would be the largest crop since 1958. The 1963 crop was 100,000 bushels and the 1958-62 average 120,000 bushels.
