

There Are No Problems In Making A "Least Cost Formula"

More Important Is To Know How To Make A Formula For "Least Cost Per Unit Of Production"

The surest way for poultrymen to judge the benefits from Early Bird's modern nutrition and quality control is to keep reliable records like this . . .

Record of Flock

With these as a tool you can work toward improvements in conversion and more profitable production.

A fraction of a pound improvement in conversion into meat or eggs will save you many dollars per year.

Crop Summary

Rainfall in the county this week benefited crop growth

There were a few reports of early cutting of tobacco

Reduced humidity later in the week favored drying of hays

According to the Pa Crop Reporting Service an inch or more of rain fell on the western half of the state early in the week

Pastures in particular showed marked improvement and grazing is possible in most sections. In some of the drier areas, especially the north-eastern corner of the state, "grasses lack succulence"

Corn is looking good in most areas, and the small grain harvest is proceeding normally although weeds hinder combining in a few localities. Hay-making was speeded as reduced humidity provided better drying weather.

Sweet corn and early varieties of apples and peaches are becoming more plentiful on the market and at roadside stands.

Sour cherries are a problem, however. The bumper crop is so big that processors are having trouble keeping up with supplies, and declining prices may result in some of the fruit not being picked
