LET'S HOPE SEPTEMBER
WILL BE BETTER

Pennsylvania's weather was a paradox for farmers last week

In dry eastern and central counties they watched skies hopefully for signs of rain that is urgently needed by crops, especially corn

But the seven-day period ending August 31, was "the driest week of the current growing season" in the eastern two-third of Pennsylvania, according to the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service.

In the area immediately surrounding Lancaster city, a total rainfall of 1.54 inches was measured Although this was not as dry an August as 1957 (0.56 inches), it was below normal, and too dry for good growing conditions

Western counties fared a little better, with up to half an inch of rain There farmers were hoping for warm, dry weather so they could get back to their field work — combining oats baling straw, making hay and plowing

Slightly warmer weather during the week aided corn growth in areas where there was sufficient soil moisture

But in north central and northeastern counties, many fields are showing the effect of continuing drought "Stalks are short, turning yellow and wilting Ears are small and poorly filled," the Crop Reporting Service commented.
Bird damage is increasing in these areas, too, the Service noted

Although hay crops in some areas look good, pastures generally are below average throughout the state and are being supplemented with green chop and silage

Potatoes are making little growth in the dry east, while northwestern growers are anticipating good yields as they prepare to start digging the crop

Tobacco cutting is progressing rapidly, tomatoes are ripening fast with picking on the increase, and sweet corn is plentiful The peach and apple harvest is proceeding at a normal pace

Cabbage and late plantings of snap beans need rain

A dollar may not go as far as it used to, but what it lacks in distance it makes up in speed
