

ANTLERLESS DEER KILL . . . Antlerless deer, protected during the two-week buck season in Pennsylvania, become legal targets Monday and Tuesday, December 14 and 15. Only hunters possession a special antlerless deer license for a particular county may legally hunt antlerless deer if they have not already killed a deer this season.

Glenn L. Bowers, Deputy Executive Director, reported that nearly all the 274,800 antlerless deer licenses allocated for sale by county treasurers have been sold. He estimated that at least 225,000 hunters will participate in the two-day hunt.

Under the Pennsylvania antlerless deer license system, first started by law in 1951, the Game Commission allocates a definite number of licenses for each county of the Commonwealth. The number varies from year to year and is based on the desired number of antlerless deer to be harvested in order to keep the deer herd in balance with its natural food supply. Last year, 204,450 licenses produced a harvest of 35,237 antlerless animals during the two-day season in December.

"Unless the weather turns exceptionally bad," Bowers stated, "the two-day 1964 antlerless season should yield a harvest of at least 40,000 deer. This will be the eighth consecutive antlerless deer season. It marks a continuation of our deer herd management program which, for the past five years, has produced a harvest of at least 38,000 antlered deer in addition to a regular crop of antlerless animals. This should be ample proof that the antlerless deer license system is the best way to manage the Pennsylvania deer herd. We have good buck hunting, a productive deer herd and less damage to the range which is so important to the future of deer hunting."

The antlerless deer season will last for six days, December 14-19, in parts of four southeastern counties. Antlerless deer hunting during time will be legal with shot in parts of Bucks, Delaware, and Montgomery counties.
