 22 OPEN HEIFERS
GOOD DHIA RECORDS
 T. B. & Bangs Cert. Vacc. Dehorned
 The late Harry Shenk was one of the pioneer Guernsey breeders in Penna. Over the last 30 years Harry moved twice, each time sold out and then started again. We have had the privilege to manage these sales. His sound judgment and cow knowledge benefited the buyers of his cattle. He was always ably assisted by Mrs. Shenk, who is still living but is unable to carry on.
 The herd has been under the direct management of Dave Sharp for the last few years, a conscientious dairyman and farmer who has kept the herd in top condition.

The buyer will find many fresh or due to his liking; 32 will have been recently fresh or are due before the end of the year. 12 from January through March.

Many popular bulls represented. 14 in calf to High Meadows Conqueror, 11 to McDonald Farms Royal Crown, etc. There are some extremely good cow families.
 There is money to be made in a purchase of the open heifers for those who have feed and either need them as replacements or wish to offer them for sale at a later date.

Hunters Should Get To Know Landowners

Although there is more publicly-owned land on which to hunt in Pennsylvania than in most states, the majority of game taken in the commonwealth is harvested on privately-owned property. This is especially true of small game, much of which is taken on farms.

Harmonious landowner-hunter relationships over the years have made possible an increased harvest of game birds and animals in the state and the Pennsylvania Game Commission this week urged that these relationships be strengthened and expanded.

An oversupply of wildlife can be harmful to farm crops, and harvesting of surplus game benefits the farmer as well as supplying recreation and sport for hunters. Since the farmer stands to gain, he generally welcomes responsible hunters.

But how is a landowner to determine if a hunter is "responsible"? Only if he knows the hunter can he tell how the person conducts himself.

A sportsman always asks for permission from the property owner before hunting. A hunting license does not entitle anyone to trespass on private property. But when a stranger walks up to a landowner on the opening day of the season and asks for permission to hunt, what can be expected?

An instantaneous friendship is difficult to develop, and a property owner can't be blamed if he refuses a stranger permission to hunt immediately. An irresponsible person could bring nothing but trouble.

The Game Commission encourages hunters to know landowners. Mutual friendship and respect established now is likely to assure the sportsman a place to hunt later. And contact should be maintained on a year-round basis, not just during hunting seasons.

Irresponsible conduct on the part of a small minority of hunters often results in posting of land. The sport of many can be ruined by one hunter's thoughtless act, such as blocking a driveway or lane with a vehicle, shooting near buildings or persons, leaving gates open, tramping down farm crops, breaking down fences, littering, etc.

A sportsman who shows respect for person and property and who shares his game with the landowner is likely to be invited to return to hunt again. Inconsiderate conduct can close the land for all hunters.

Get to know the landowner — now.

39 Neighbors Aid Injured Manor Farmer

Friends and neighbors joined forces recently to finish harvesting the tobacco at the Howard Long farm, Columbia R2, when the Manor Township farmer was injured.

Long crushed his heel when he fell from scaffolding, when only two-thirds of his 15 acres of tobacco had been harvested. His 39 helpers came in and completed the harvesting in one day.

Those helping were Lloyd R. Swisher, Henry Gerhart, Roy Nissley, Christ Charles, Lloyd S. Swisher, Jerry Breeman, Newton Groff, Charles Shellenberger, Christ Habecker, Robert Shellenberger, Glenn Burkholder, Charles Felch, John Burkholder, D.
