

Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Assn. Met

President Ben Burkholder welcomed the 27 members in attendance at the Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Association held last week.

A report on the Pennsylvania Egg Exchange activity by Ray Sauder pointed out that, information each week developed a pattern that is essential in analyzing the market potential. During the month of February, the information on longs and shorts, showed a definite trend essential to a marketer in planning his program. The New York market uses this information to good advantage and in many instances it can be projected that, the entire industry is benefited. The Exchange can use more members and every one who joins will benefit as have the present members.

President Burkholder indicated that those who are engaged in production and marketing in Penna., should stay alert to the possibility that our industry could be raided. If this should happen while materials, labor, and all other costs continue to rise, a serious situation could develop. We must work together, and by all means treat all of the people with whom we deal, with respect.

Some discussion centered around the development of a program to purchase supplies jointly at a savings. In as much as no working plan could be developed at once, the matter was set aside to be studied and provide some workable plan in the near future.

$100 REWARD!

Forty County Farm Bureaus in Iowa are now offering $100 rewards for information on rural thefts and vandalism. And six counties have reported making reward payments under this program since it was started about two years ago in Linn County.

The rewards are basically the same, offering $100 for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of an individual or individuals who steal or destroy property on farms. The county sheriff determines who is to receive the reward.

Kermit Birth from the University discussed the Packers and Stockyards Act. He said there were many amendments to the present Act, and no one knows how these will be treated as the bill progresses. "A complete search indicates that eggs have never been included even though poultry is".

Following a general discussion of the P & S Act, the group suggested that someone from the P & S Division be invited to attend a meeting to explain the P & S coverage with the idea of exploring the possibility of including eggs.

Toni Stemberger explained that, Senate Bill 2272, introduced in Washington is not a marketing order as many people are led to believe. "The Bill simply will give permission to develop a marketing order and spelling out some of the conditions for such a development. "Among other things the Bill calls for establishing an Egg Board, to draw up an order which would then be offered as a referendum to the industry to decide." "An Egg Board consisting of six producer members would establish quotas, promotion, and many other things they would feel the industry needed".

During a general discussion it was agreed that the industry should stay alerted to this and other legislation and be ready to take a stand and act when necessary.
