

Remove Snow Tires Now.

Now that spring is here, it's time to get those snow tires off the family car, says Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

Snow treads wear rapidly when driving on dry pavement and a few weeks of highway travel will take off much of the snow traction you'll need next winter. It's especially important to remove studded tires early in the spring. Studs wear as quickly as the tread itself on bare pavement and the studs are usually worth seven to nine dollars per tire.

Snow tires should be stored flat on wheels, says Williams. Having extra wheels saves you the time and expense of mounting and demounting tires twice a year and reduces the possibility of tire damage.

Several area feed dealers and their farmer customers were among 300 agricultural leaders who were recent guests of Allied Mills when they toured the Wayne Research Center in Libertyville, Ill., to learn of new profit opportunities in animal agriculture. A View From The Governor's Office

BY GOVERNOR
RAYMOND P. SHAFER

He was Governor of this State when the Constitution under which our Commonwealth functions was drafted That was 1873—95 years ago

That document had many features that were sound and enduring, but in the main it is not strong, not elastic and not suited to the problems of modern-day society

Over the years it has confined our State and local Governments, it has cost our taxpayers millions; it has impeded administration of justice and, in short, has forced government to steam toward the 21st Century without being able to adapt to the urgent demands of today and tomorrow.

I want to change that, with your help For the first time in nearly a century, we will have an opportunity to do just that

On April 23—Primary Election Day — we will vote on five amendments to our Constitution that will eliminate the creaking and groaning that is inherent in the old Constitution

The Constitutional Convention, just concluded, has drafted amendments which — in my opinion — deserve a yes vote This is not a partisan, political plea Republicans, Democrats and Independents helped frame the amendments and they have the support of both political parties.

I told the delegates, on the final day of the Convention, that there will be those who will try to persuade the people not to adopt the proposals Some will argue they don't go far enough; others, that they go too far or that they don't represent what some individual or group personally wanted

To have the total effort of the Convention fall to this kind of opposition would be the highest and saddest folly of this century for Pennsylvania and her future

The five questions on the ballot concern four subjects local government, taxation and finance, the administration of justice and apportionment of the Legislature

A yes vote on the local government question would wash away the antiquated barriers to effective self-government

A yes vote on the judiciary question would centralize administration of courts under jurisdiction of the State Supreme Court It would also bring badly needed reform to the justice-of-the-peace system and eliminate the fee system.

A yes vote on the apportionment would clarify and strengthen the method of redistricting to conform closer to actual changes in population

A yes vote on the taxation and finance questions would, among other things, remove the present limit on Commonwealth borrowing — one million dollars — totally unrealistic in a State that I am the first to admit that spends $7 million a day. these revisions in our Constitution will not automatically bring a new heaven here on earth for Pennsylvania But they will do one thing:

They will give our governors, legislators, judges, mayors, councilmen — now and in the future — the means to deal far more effectively with the problems that press in on them, and on all of us

With your help and active support, the creation of a modern Constitution for Pennsylvania, so badly needed for so many years, will become a reality.

I urge five yes votes on April 23.

A bridge over the Missouri River near Decatur, Nebraska, was built over dry land, a few years ago. Then, the river was routed under it — and the project saved many thousands of dollars

People become strong and healthy, not so much from what they eat, but from what they digest and assimilate Is this not true of the human mind??
