Cattle Shrink Affects Price

When you ship cattle to market the highest price per pound doesn't necessarily mean the highest profit or the most money received per animal.

All cattle lose weight while you are sorting, loading and hauling them to market. An understanding of this weight loss, or "shrink," or "drift" as it is sometimes called is important to those who make a living in the livestock and meat business. Most cattle will shrink up to 3 percent if feed and water is withheld for 12 hours. Further shrink occurs during hauling. The greatest amount of hauling shrink occurs during the first few miles after leaving the farm.

Some cattle feeders take pride in topping the market. Market topping cattle are usually very fat and show a well shrunk condition. While these two factors are not necessarily bad, the end result can be deceiving. A higher price per pound on cattle with no fill may result in no more total money than a lower price per pound on a normal fill.

An understanding of shrink or weighing conditions is important when comparing prices received at the market place — Lester A. Burdette—Pa. State U.

Apples in Pennsylvania cold storages totaled 116,700,000 pounds on December 31, with York Imperials accounting for more than one-third of the holdings. Almost 60 percent of the stocks are intended for processing, according to the State Crop Reporting Service.

Shipwreck Spot

More than 130 shipwrecks have occurred around the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic Ocean because of the strong winds, which average 25 miles per hour, and a lack of beacons.
