Livestock Day

Animal Agriculture to Our Economy." Mr. Stiles will discuss "New Developments in Animal Management."

Afternoon meetings will feature reports from livestock research projects underway at Penn State and will adjourn at 3:30 p.m. Swine research topics will include various aspects of farrow-to-finish confinement systems, the feeding of lactating sows, baby pig nutrition, and the results and value of swine carcass shows.

Topics for beef cattle breeders and producers will include selected sire progeny testing studies, taste panel evaluations for cattle of different breeds, and roughage substitutes. Researchers will discuss the use of mature corn for silage, regulation of feed intake, factors affecting productivity of pastures, and other topics.

Reports in the sheep section will include use of liquid protein supplements in finishing rations, comparisons of creep and no-creep feeding systems, and effects of internal parasites on profits. Attention will be given to accuracy of live-animal estimation of carcass traits and to estrous synchronization. Comparisons of growth rate, feed efficiency, and carcass desirability will be compared for rams and wethers.
