George Keehn
Tomato Grower

A seven-foot tall tomato plant is the pride and joy of George Keehn, who grew the plant at his home, 30 E Market St., Lititz. What makes it especially remarkable is that he used no fertilizer and gave the plant little attention other than tying it up. He did mix some moss with the clay soil to loosen it up. The size of the tomatoes is in keeping with the size of the stalk, George insists.

Don't give those suckers a break.

Every acre of tobacco has about 200,000 suckers. That's 200,000 reasons you ought to use "Sucker-Stuff." Just spray it on once. "Sucker-Stuff" has a quicker sticker. This makes it faster and better. Which is reason two hundred thousand and one.
