

For The Farm Wife

He said "There are some qualitative changes in our society. Young people are experiencing so many more new experiences than we had. Suddenly for them everywhere is here. One of the dangers we face is confining our experiences to our conformity."

"Nothing leads more rapidly to extinction than genetic conformity. America was not built on people who thought the same. This is one of the things that made America great. Another temptation, it is awful easy to turn back the clock, we are prone to rest on yesterday's laurels. They are foundations on which we build. We must do a better job in training mind and heart. We must realize in education we must get a crossfire between the old and the new ideas."

"A second temptation, for the younger group, is strictly criticizing without any respect for the past. There is some standard in loving this past and respecting it and understanding it. The first temptation can only lead to stagnation, the second to destruction. The younger generation has an intellectual maturity higher than we had at the same age. Let us not just react against them but give some thought to working with them."

"The new man is an impatient one. He has had everything handed to him. He can see us making a mistake in getting into the war but he can't see us taking so long in getting out. Man does not live by knowledge alone. Man must also have some humility."

A cello trio composed of Mina Fisher, Loreen Gottshall and Linda Card and a string quartette composed of Elizabeth Ochs, Mary Koo, Jackie Smith and Mina Fisher from the Lancaster Conservatory of Music very ably rendered several classical numbers.

Mrs. Dummer, State President, installed the newly elected county officers as well as the officers of the local Farm Women Societies. Mrs. Nissley, returning County President, presented Mrs. Dummer a painting of the Quarryville Groundhog Lodge painted by the State Farm Women Secretary and member of Society #15, Mrs. Martin Greenleaf. She also presented Mrs. John Hess with the gavel and the president's pin as president of the Lancaster County Farm Women. Mrs. Hess presented a pearl necklace to Mrs. Nissley from the Societies then spoke briefly of the honor bestowed upon her in being selected to serve as county president. The program concluded by group singing "Brighten The Corner."

Syngoniums Are Foolproof Houseplants

Are you looking for a foolproof houseplant? One that's easy to grow and yet always looks attractive? Then get a syngonium (SIN GO' NI UM).

According to a Pennsylvania State University correspondence course on houseplants, syngoniums want semi-shade, average house temperature and humidity, and soil of equal parts garden loam, perlite and peatmoss kept evenly moist. They tolerate abuse and irregular care.

The plants have arrowhead like leaves on long stalks. There are many varieties. Trileaf Wonder has white-spotted leaves six inches long on petioles up to 20 inches. Emerald Gem has crinkled foliage and grows compactly. Mostly the plants you find offered for sale have glossy green leaves of solid color on petioles eight to ten inches long.

Propagation is by single-node

Livestock Barns

The proper ventilation of livestock barns during the Winter months is very important. Many dairy barns are filled to capacity and those practicing stanchion or comfort stall management should give some attention to this practice. When there is condensation from the ceiling or from the windows, it indicates either the lack of proper insulation or poor ventilation. The use of electric exhaust fans have been very successful in removing this extra moisture and heat from the building. For the sake of improved production and the life of the building, good ventilation needs attention during the Winter months. Publications on the subject are available from the Extension Office.

Buying Evaporated Milk

If you are a busy homemaker who likes to be economical evaporated milk is an important item to put on your shopping list. With colder weather ahead you'll be set to make nourishing and appealing soups, casseroles and desserts that call for milk.

Evaporated milk ranks second only to dry milk as an economical buy. Whether you buy the large size or the small size cans may make little difference in the cost. It may be wise to buy the smaller size cans if that's what you need for a particular recipe.

Considerations Before Buying A Garment

To make the smartest, both fashion and dollar-wise, buy in clothes consider these questions:

Is it attractive in style, color and fabric?
Is it becoming to you?
Does it fit well? If alterations are necessary can you do them?

Does it meet a need in your wardrobe?

How well will it go with the other clothes in your wardrobe?

Will wrinkling be a problem during wear?

If drycleaning required, is this expense justified?

Do you think it will wear well and remain "in style" for a reasonable period of time?

Is the cost justified by your stem cuttings. A leaf with node and short section of stem inserted upright in moist peatmoss or perlite at 75 to 80 degrees soon takes root.

budget and the amount of wear you expect to get from it?

Care Of Unripe Fruit

Because temperature is an important factor in ripening, don't put unripe fruit in the refrigerator. Slightly underripe fruits that are fresh and sound will ripen in open air at room temperature. Do not place them in sun.

Pumpkin In Your Meals

Cooked pumpkin is the basis for many taste treats.

Pumpkin lends itself to soups, quick breads, cookies and desserts other than pie and custard.

You can cut pumpkin in strips, leaving the skin on, and cook or bake until pumpkin is tender.

Season pumpkin to taste and serve as a hot vegetable.

Vending Machines Are Popular

More than 77,000 times every minute, American consumers are dropping a coin into a vending machine. This amounts to 111 million coins per day and an annual sales volume of more than $4.5 billion dollars for the year 1967. Ten years ago it was about $2.1 billion dollars.
