Household Pest Course

Whether it's ants in your pantry, cockroaches in your basement or ticks on your pets, your reaction is probably the same—let's get rid of the pests!

How to do it is the subject of a Pennsylvania State University correspondence course on household pests and their controls.

With ants, the key to control is to find their nest and apply insecticides on and into it and anywhere ants travel. The intent is not only to kill the ants you see but also to get worker ants to carry poison to the queen in the nest as they feed her, thus killing the mother of the colony and destroying the source of population increase.

Tweed is a great kick for kids to be on. A raglan-sleeve cardigan has neat styling for school, plus a rough-and-ready texture for after. The zippered front makes the sweater suitable for boys or girls, in children's sizes 4-10. It is knitted in the stockinette stitch, mixing strands of white and navy fingering yarn together. The neck and front edges have a simple crocheted border. Free instructions are available by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to this newspaper along with your request for Leaflet PK 1117.

In cockroach control get the insecticides where the insects hide rather than where they travel. Cockroaches don't live in nests but are dispersed in an area, such as a house or row of houses.

Ticks are inhabitants of woods and fields. They're also associated with dogs and other animals. Control consists of finding both dogs and their living quarters of the insects and clearing mail.

Beware of 'Easy Buck' Door-to-Door Repairs

As people grow older, they may not be able to climb step ladders or go out on the roof to make home repairs, says June Wilke, Chester County Extension Home Economist. They have to hire someone else to do the work.

Almost all of the contractors in the home repair field are honest but just a few are trying to make an 'easy buck'.

The dishonest operators may work on a door-to-door selling basis, making personal calls on the elderly and suggesting that they look at the home for an estimate or repair costs.

Having gained the confidence of the elderly person, the unscrupulous agent then proceeds to find many things needing repair and pressures the resident into a large sale contract for repair, often larger than the person on retirement income can afford.

One 70-year old Pennsylvania woman awoke one morning to find her furnace not working. A furnace company gave her an estimate for repairs of $563.

But before signing the contract, she had the fuel company check her furnace too. The fuel company inspector found the pilot line needed cleaning and performed the job without charge. The furnace was back in service and the woman had saved $563.
