

Ida's Notebook

Deer hunting season is here and with it comes the job of hunting warm clothes too. This usually means opening all three of my chests to be sure a favorite sweater hasn't been missed

My husband, two tall sons and I usually hunt for only one day and then come home in time to do the milking.

The first thing I did last year was fall on the icy road and break my thumb under the gun which I fell on.

My throbbing thumb didn't deter me though and I saw about 10 deer. Several came within 12 feet and then pawed the ground before turning to dash away with the white plume of their tails sticking straight up in the air.

My son came home from college to hunt and was rewarded with a nice six-point buck. It's hard to tell what our luck will be this year, but the snow covered woods and the quiet mountains are worth the trip.

This week the parents in our township each had an appointment to visit the teacher of their child in the elementary schools. There were no written report cards. At least the parents will now know something of the teacher's personality and she in turn can now judge the child's background better.

be getting computerized report cards for the first time. Oh, yes, my son is doing excellent work, according to the teacher.

Last week, I tried making the apple butter I mentioned earlier. We were all pleased with the results and I put some in baby food jars as possible gifts at Christmas. The jelly and jam which I make during the summer, together with extra flower bulbs, are often used as gifts.

Soon, I'll replace the Indian corn on the doors with evergreen, red ribbons and bells.

The young children's pleas for popcorn after supper will be met more frequently. There is something cozy about popcorn on a winter night, especially when there is hot cocoa and marshmallows to go with it.

Now, if we can just figure a way to have fewer meetings and more time to stay home and enjoy our families
