Honey Brook Animal
Lab License Taken

A consent order to suspend a dealer's license has been issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to a laboratory animal dealer charged with violation of the Laboratory Animal Welfare Act.

The license of Charles Hazzard, operator of the North Creek Breeding Colony, Honey Brook, has been suspended by USDA's Agricultural Research Service until such time as he can demonstrate his business is in compliance with provisions of the Act. At such time, recommendation would be made by ARS officials that his license be reinstated.

Mr Hazzard, who waived an oral hearing, has neither admitted nor denied the charges but consented to the issuance of the order, which contained findings and conclusions based upon allegations set forth in the formal complaint. These include refusal to allow USDA investigators entry to his kennels during normal duty hours and failure to identify dogs properly before selling them to another dealer. Under provisions of the Act, animal dealers are required to identify dogs by an official tag or a legible and distinctive tattoo. Mr. Hazzard was also charged with failure to make and retain records regarding the sale of dogs.

The Laboratory Animal Welfare Act directs the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate the transportation, handling, and sale in interstate commerce of dogs, cats, hamsters, monkeys, rabbits, and guinea pigs used in research.

In enforcing the Act, USDA has uncovered many suspected violations. Many of the cases have been resolved without the need for court action. However, USDA has found it necessary to file charges in some cases and is still investigating others.
