

Dr. Russell G. Rothgeb (left), longtime corn and small grain breeder at the University of Maryland, holds personal plaque naming him the first Distinguished Maryland Agronomist. Large permanent plaque with space for future award winners is held by Stanley P. Stabler of Brookeville, Md. (right), a Montgomery county farmer and longtime supervisor of the university agronomy farm where many of Dr. Rothgeb's experiments were conducted. Presentation was made recently at the sixty-fourth annual meeting of the Maryland Crop Improvement Association in Baltimore.
