Pa. Young Farmers Week

Governor Milton Shapp has declared November 7 to 13 as Pennsylvania Young Farmers Week.

The Proclamation noted that the Association is organized through the vocational agriculture program in public schools to provide continued educational opportunities for young farm families.

"Young Farmer programs in local communities provide technical information, develop civic responsibilities, and promote rural-urban understanding.

"The Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association enables young farm families throughout the state to associate together in frequent planned meetings, whereby they gain new ideas, create new friendships, and acquire valuable experiences. "The achievements of the Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association merit public recognition."

Workshops For Brides

The Cooperative Extension Service has scheduled a workshop for brides-to-be.

The workshop covers serving nutritious meals, helping budget money, and managing time wisely.

The workshop will be held at 7 p.m. November 15, November 22 and November 29 at the Farm and Home Center.

Farm News Brief

Of every ten acres of corn grown today, 8.8 acres are grown for grain, and 1.2 are chopped for silage.

Gibble, PCA vice president, and Paul M. Herr, FLBA director.

He explained that the role of the tax surcharge in the economic policy is to make imported products more costly in relation to products grown or produced in this country; this makes products in this country more competitive at the retail level with the imports.

What happens in the future, he said, may depend on how people evaluate the long-term ability of the federal government to control inflation. He indicated that if people believe the anti-inflation policies will work and act accordingly, they probably will be successful.

He also noted that with the present policies, "this country has turned drastically away from a competitive, free-enterprise system." If the policy doesn't work, he said, there's concern that controls will be made even tighter.

Toastmaster was Elvin Hess Jr., Strasburg RD1, a PCA director.
