effective for about 120 days. If he wants to implant the animals a second time, he'll have to separate them out from the herd (because not all the animals are implanted at the same time), then he'll have to confine them. Disturbing the animals that way hurts production, and it's possible he'll lose more than he'd gain from a second implant.

Keener's second objection is that he doesn't like to fool around the animals too much, because they get angry. "When those steers come here to the farm, we'll confine them to give them their IVR shots, their worming boultice and then the DES implant. By the time we get around to the ears, that steer is going to be plenty mad. It's too easy to get an arm broken or a head kicked in."

Enriching Soil To Hasten Tree Harvest by 2017

A 724-ton fertilizer helicopter airdrop on 4,423 acres of Georgia-Pacific Corp. tree gardens in Oregon's Coos, Land and Lincoln counties and Humboldt county in northern California was made recently to insure an "early" harvest by growers, in the year 2017 instead of several years beyond.

The crop is trees for plywood, lumber, paper or cellulose and lignin products which are not even on the market today. The farmers explain that rushing a crop 45-years distant is based on a demand for forest products which "requires continued improvement in timber management practices."

Lisa Johnson, Millersville, the reserve.

Sharon Peters, of the Garden Spot Sewing Club, took top honors in the "let's make a dress" category, while Pam Nissley, Manheim, earned reserve champion recognition.

In knitting, Carole Gainer of Mountville was named champion and Eileen Kraft, also of Mountville, reserve.

The "start stitching" class was won by Teresa Dagen; the best slippers were shown by Kathie Stoltzfus and Susan Howell's slip-on was judged best of the show.

Also taking champion awards were Laurie Leaman in the aprons category and Susan Howe in the toe-bag sewing class.
