All-American Grants Status To Railbirds

"Railbird judging" was of-ficially recognized for the first time at the Ninth Annual Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show this week in Harrisburg. Railbirds exist in all spectator sports but are known by different names. In football, they're called Monday morning quarterbacks and in baseball they're named grandstand managers. They are the second-guessers, kibitzers.

ternationally-accalimed judges, there always exists that group of breeders and herdsmen that think they are better. This is, at best, an immodest attitude as the judges for this year's All-American came from all parts of North America — two from Wisconsin and one each from California, Tennesee, Ohio and Canada.

Twice each day, during the judging in the main arena, the judges initially selected six of the top cows in a class. Other officials distributed scorecards to interested railbirds who had an opportunity to place six animals in their proper order.

The cards were then collected and within an hour or so, aided by computerized grading, a winner was announced. The winner in each class received a trophy.
