

"Ole Sherrif" Bobby Montgomery put up a game fight at Friday night's cow milking contest at the Ephrata Fair. He'd won the trophy two years in a row, and a win this year would have given him permanent possession of the trophy. He lost though, and to a woman. He was a graceful loser.

Donald Wenger captured both the grand and reserve grand championships at the junior dairy cattle show held last Friday at the Ephrata Fair.

Mrs. Helen Stuber proved her mettle as a milker at the Ephrata Fair on Friday night. She and her Ayrshire partner Cybil, proved too much for the other three contestants, all men.

Nelson Weaver, left, sold his Ephrata Fair grand champion hog to Penn-Jersey Harvestore for $1.01 a pound. Bill Wingenroth, right, represented Penn-Jersey in the transaction.

Twila is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester D. Snader. A senior at Garden Spot High School she is majoring in business.

Twila also was named the champion fitter of the show, with judge Lester Burdette, University of Pennsylvania livestock specialist, picking her steer as the cleanest and best groomed.

She completed her winning day by taking reserve champion honors in the showmanship contest and selling her steer an hour later at the New Holland Sales Stables for the day's top price of $1 a pound.

Josh weighed 1,015 pounds and was purchased by Norman Kolb.

Twila showed the reserve grand champion steer at last year's New Holland Fair.

The reserve grand champion steer this year was shown by Linda High, who just one week ago showed the grand champion steer at the Ephrata Fair.

Linda is the 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey High, of Lancaster. Her winning steer, also a Hereford, and weighing 945 pounds, was sold to the Weaver Trucking Co., for 59 cents a pound.

The grand champion Angus steer and third place animal overall in the competition was shown by Cindy Yoder, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Yoder of Elverson R2. Cindy's steer, Charlie, sold for 49½ cents a pound to Sensenig's Supermarket, New Holland R.1.

Cindy was also named champion showman and reserve champion fitter of the show.

In the hog competition, ten-year-old Jeanie Martin took grand champion honors with a 210 pound crossbreed.

Her sister, Susie, 14, showed the reserve grand champion hog. The girls are the daughters of Mary Martin, New Holland R2. The swine fitting championship went to Kathy Folker of New Holland R2, and showmanship honors to Wayne Martin, of Goodville.

In the tractor driving contest held early Thursday evening, Walter C. Martin of New Holland R2 came in first. Dale Herr, New Holland R2 was second, and Harvey Sauder, New Holland R1 was third. All are vo-ag students at Garden Spot High School.

In the cornpicker race Superpickers finish first and first.

No. 1 among 1-row pickers—
the 1-row pull Superpicker

No. 1 among 2-row pickers—
the 2-row pull Superpicker for wide or narrow rows
Optional shelling and grinding units

Every new Idea picker has the famous Superpicker capacity gathering head and snapping rolls. The long, tapered floating points that lift those down and tangled stalks. Trash rolls. Beaters. All the things that make a Superpicker a super picker. Stop in and ask for a look-see. And ask too, about the 3-row wide or narrow Superpicker or the exclusive 3-row Supersheller. Its cage sheller interchanges on two-row pull Superpickers as well. Remember. In the picker race, Superpickers are first and first.

There's a good idea behind every New Idea.
