

A contingent of six Hungarian dairymen stopped at the Black and White Holstein Farm last Friday on the first leg of a U.S. buying trip. Greeting them were William C. Nichol (far right) and Jay Howe (holding calf) of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, and Oscar Kennedy (next to Howe) of the National Holstein-Friesian Association.

dispersal for some time, and this just seemed to be the right year to do it. Kauffman said he might feed some beef animals over the fall, but he plans to get back into the dairy business after the first of the year. His temporary retirement plans include a vacation trip to Hawaii.

E Clair and Kathryn Fisher, Lewistown, paid the second highest price of the day for a seven-year-old cow, Sedgrose Mary Texen. They also paid $2000 for a two-year-old.

Dale W Hoffman, Bloomsburg, paid $2000 for a yearling, Glenn Bowen, Wellsboro, bought a ten-year-old for $2250, Duane Matlocks, Troy N J., paid $1750 for a four-year-old, and H D Matz, Ephrata, bought a six-year-old for $1500.

planning analyst, talked about the Pennsylvania Solid Waste Management Act.

He said no permit of any kind is required for spreading manure.

Both Durr and LaCour, though, urged common sense in the disposal of manure saying the two main things to avoid are spreading too close to a stream, or spreading on too steep a hill, where rainfall could wash the waste into streams. Grazing cattle in a normal pasture situation is not a problem under this law.
