Area Farmers Call On Congressmen

Area farmers paid visits to their senators and congressmer in Washington, D.C. this week.

Food prices were high on the list of conversation items between the lawmakers and the farmers.

Donald Hershey, president of the Lancaster County Farmers Assn. reported that Rep. Edwin Eshleman said legislators are not interested in freezing farm food prices, but might consider a retail food price freeze.

Eshleman also told the farmers he would like to see the Penn Central Railroad continue

After 40 remember to ask your doctor for a pro to as part of your annual health checkup It's a lifesaver, says the American Cancer Society.

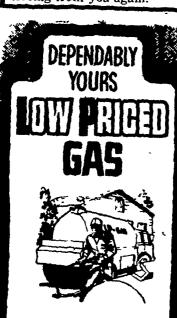

Never throw away the cuffs of worn-out ankle socks but cut them off and use as wristlets when sl.ampooing hair or washing woodwork. No more sudsy water running to the elbow.

operation, but he is not interested in loaning that company another $200 million.

Even if President Nixon vetoes a new Rural Enivornmental Assistance Program (REAP), Eshleman said a new bill in congress will contain many of the same programs for farmers.

Senator Richard Schweiker told the farmers that he wouldn't leave the Penn Central Railroad go out of business.

A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency told the farmers that large operators with over 700 cows, more than 1,000 steers or over 100,000 chickens, can expect to be required to secure a permit just to dispose of the manure on their farms in the future.

Hershey called the direct contact between farmers and lawmakers, "the best thing we've got as far as working with our legislators.

"Farmers for many years didn't say anything till the tree was cut down," Hershey explained. "Now 90 percent of the fellows in Washington are willing to work with us," he said.

The visit was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farmers Assn.

Two Machine-Harvestable Tomato Varieties Released

Two new machine-harvestable processing tomato varieties, ARC and CHEF, have been released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The new varieties are the result of 10 or more years of research by USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS) to develop crops superior to those now grown in characteristics important to consumers, farmers and processors. Biological control of crop diseases and pests, by incorporating genetic resistance into new varieties, is emphasized in this continuing cooperative effort by ARS and cooperating State agricultural experiment stations.

ARC is a late maturing, productive, medium-sized vine, crack-resistant variety that is resistant to gray leaf spot, Fusarium and Verticillium wilts, harvestable by machine and has good processing quality ARC has performed well in trials in central Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Beltsville, Md. It machine-harvested satisfactorily in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Beltsville in 1971 and 1972.

CHEF is an early maturing, productive, small-vined, jointless pedicel, crack-resistant variety that is resistant to gray leaf spot, Fusarium and Verticillium wilts, harvestable by machine and has good processing quality.

CHEF has performed well in trials in central Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, central California and Beltsville, Md. It also machine-harvested satisfactorily in Pennsylvania and Beltsville in 1971 and 1972.

USDA has no seed for distribution.
