A DHIA workshop for New Holland area dairy farmers has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 3 at Garden Spot High School beginning at 7:45 p.m.

Herbert Gilmore, head of the DHIA program in Pennsylvania, will conduct the workshop. He'll be assisted by N. Alan Bair, assistant Lancaster County Agent.

During the workshop, Gilmore and Bair will discuss the use of DHIA records in formulating guides to culling, feeding and feed costs. The workshop is being sponsored by the New Holland area Young Farmers organization, but all interested dairymen are invited to attend.

Participants should bring their DHIA records covering the period from March, 1972, to March, 1973. They should also bring their life history sheets.

Farms - Going but not Gone

industrial areas, and another 25,000 acres devoted to homes for the extra 200,000 people who are expected to swell the county's population by 1985.

Most importantly, Funk said, was the encouragement of an agricultural climate within the county that would enable farmers to stay on the land if they want to. He also urged the group to vote for the ballot referendum in May that will enable farmland to be taxed on the basis of its use rather than its speculative value.

Anthony Perella, speaking for the Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber was seeking to maintain a slow, steady rate of growth concentrating on providing jobs for the people who are already here. He said the CofC was definitely not interested in luring big industries to the county and one of the reasons was a shortage of labor. Perella pointed out that the CofC had gone on record as supporting the land use taxation ballot referendum.

One member of the audience challenged Perella by saying that industry was coming in at a faster rate than natural population growth. This creates a demand for more houses and more services, gobbling up more land in the process. He also pointed out that some CofC members were actively campaigning to attract all the industry they could to Lancaster County.

Towards the end of the meeting, Donovan Smith spoke at some length about the benefits he felt accrued to all citizens of the county from the tourist industry. He did say that the tourist bureau members realized that it was in their own self interest to preserve the county's scenic charm, and that the industry would probably level off at some point in the future. Several LEAF members said they'd like the tourist industry to disappear altogether.
