Society 29

Farm Women Society 29 met at the quaint Musser's Spring House recently when the Society entertained Society 13 and the Lancaster County Officers. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Reinhold Berg, Mrs. Robert Denlinger, Mrs. Larry Sawadsky and Mrs. Walter Mower.

Mrs. Ronald Ober shared some thoughts on the subject "Peace" for devotions

A short business meeting followed with Mrs. Gerald Erb, vice-president, in charge. Among various items of business, the members were encouraged to submit a letter to the National

Aeronautics and Space Administration commending the December 1968 astronauts on their decision to read the Bible from their spacecraft while orbiting the moon and supporting the right of every human being to express his faith in God and the Bible publicly without fear of censure

Mrs. Martha Gehman was speaker for the evening, sharing ideas on how to decorate the home and also a stirring testimony of her faith.

New Case 7-foot windrow-conditioner treats hay like the big ones

...and then some!

The CASE 475 offers more. Like putting less hay in the windrow than a 9-foot — for faster drying-curing, especially the first cutting. It takes less horsepower, too — a 2 or 3 plow tractor does the job. And you have less overall width — just 9½ feet — for passing through narrow gates and lanes.

Yesterday's soybean meal
price was $310.00 a ton.

Can you afford it?

Soybean meal and other protein supplement prices are skyrocketing. That means it's costing you more than ever before to produce a pound of meat or milk. What's the answer?

For thousands of livestock and milk producers in the United States and Canada, the Harvestore System is the answer.

The Harvestore System lets you keep and feed more of that good protein you grow. So your supplement bill is greatly reduced or eliminated entirely.

Want to beat the high cost of supplement? Then call your Harvestore dealer today. He'll show you how you can pay for a Harvestore System in protein savings alone.

Types and Storage of Seasonings

Many of us are familiar with only a few of the mass array of herbs, spices and seeds available at our nearest grocery store. We tend to lump all seasonings together as spices, although each type of seasoning has unique characteristics, explains Catherine Love, Extension consumer education specialist at The Pennsylvania State University.

Spices are the buds, leaves, seeds, bark, roots, and berries of various aromatic plants grown in the tropics. Cloves, ginger, pepper, and nutmeg fit into this category.

Herbs are native to temperate zones. They come from leaves of aromatic plants and include bay and celery leaves, oregano, mint, sage, and many more.

Seeds are the fruit or seeds of aromatic plants and can come from various climates. Most popular are caraway, sesame and poppy seeds which are used for bread toppings. Dill is another example.

Dry mixtures of spices and herbs are called spice blends. Chili powder and pumpkin spice are two spice blends.

Vegetable seasonings are dehydrated vegetables, such as garlic or onion. A combination of these hydrated vegetables with salt would make a seasoning salt, explains Miss Love.

Mustard and catsup are two examples of condiments, which are liquid or semi-liquid mixtures of spices or herbs with other ingredients.

Herbs and spices will lose flavor and aroma over time so it may be necessary to use a larger quantity of older spices or herbs to get the same flavor results. Store these seasonings in tightly closed containers in a cool, dry place, not by the kitchen range. Miss Love points out that heat destroys their flavor.
