

Area Home Economists Keep Busy at Ag Progress Days

 An "ethnic craft show" which demonstrated the dyeing of eggs was always surrounded by a crowd. Mrs. Mary Nevenglosky and Millie Danchak, both of Tamaqua RD2 in Schuylkill County talked at great length about their skill. Mrs. Nevenglosky explained that one purpose of their exhibit was to show how to "have your egg and eat it too." The egg contents are blown out and the shell is decorated and used. The pretty designs are created through the use of wax and aniline dye, and the results are truly unique. Mrs. Nevenglosky said, "We get many, many questions, and many are from teachers who are looking for a new craft idea for the classroom."

Child safety, home

beautification, wise food shopping and menu planning for toddlers were a few of the wide range of exhibits. There was a puppet show on nutrition which attracted lots of interest.

When the women at Ag Progress Days wanted a break from the machinery and field crops demonstrations, they received a treat. Whether they were interested in beautifying their homes, planning more interesting, nutritious meals, sewing for their husbands or keeping their children safe, the wide variety of exhibits prepared by the counties in southeastern Pennsylvania offered practical, interesting information which could be put to immediate use.
