

Poultry Flock Handbook Available From State

Diseases—the cause of most concern in the poultry business—may originate in a flock in three different ways, according to a "Poultry Health Handbook" published by The Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture.

"Diseases are brought on the farm with new poultry, contamination as a result of carry-over from previous flocks, and are introduced by a lack of sanitation or relaxation of security measures," said Dr. L. Dwight Schwartz, Penn State Extension veterinarian and author of the publication.

The handbook is designed to provide poultrymen, servicemen, fieldmen, and hatcherymen with a ready and accessible source of information about poultry diseases and other aspects of poultry health.

"The introductory section includes such information as a sanitation outline, list of reliable disinfectants, a description of the Pennsylvania Vaccination Program, and other facts useful for creating and maintaining sound poultry health programs," Dr. Schwartz points out.

Another section covers the respiratory diseases of poultry regardless of causative agent, but other sections deal with diseases caused by a particular type of agent—virus, bacteria, protozoa, or parasites. Still another section is devoted to miscellaneous poultry diseases.

The book may be purchased for $2.50 plus six percent Pennsylvania sales tax. Make check or money order payable to The Pennsylvania State University and send with your name and address to: Poultry Health Handbook, Box 6000, University Park, Pa. 16802.

With our completely covered lots and a sun roof with an open peak, rain water does not enter the bay area and maximum evaporation of animal liquids is obtained. An "all-drained" floor system is installed and a curbed fence line keeps manure in place to be scraped into a liquid pit or a push-off loading system. By preventing manure run-off the surrounding area is not polluted.

Yes, since your urban neighbors and government fathers are interested in ecology, we are ready to help you build a system that will put you ahead on the pollution problem.

And, low moisture levels in Solair Systems results in less bacteria action and fewer odors.
