Book Explains AI Careers

A new 16-page booklet on career opportunities in the artificial insemination (A.I.) business is now available from Curtiss Breeding Service Division of Searle Agriculture Inc. Utilizing case histories and quotations, photos and drawings, the book explains such things as income possibilities, capital needed to start, background needed, as well as other aspects of involvement - full - or part-time - in A.I.

"The practice of artificial insemination is here to stay and growing," said one Curtiss man when interviewed in the field. "The general economics of milk and beef production continues to force more cattlemen into using A.I. to genetically improve their herds," was the view of another.

Those interested can get a free copy of the new booklet, by writing to Marketing Department, Curtiss Breeding Service, Division of Searle Agriculture Inc., Cary Ill. 60013. The booklet is entitled "What Kind of Creature is a Curtiss Man."

Hard Work Ahead

It will not be easy to change our habits, some of which have gone unquestioned for generations: throwing things away instead of repairing or recycling them, dumping our wastes into the water and the air, and wasting irreplaceable resources. It is up to Americans of this decade to develop a new pattern of environmental management. We must become the first generation to work with nature instead of against her.

There is a generation of hard work ahead of us. Each of us must make his own contribution. But the task will seem less arduous if we focus on those opportunities for betterment which present themselves from day to day. The combined efforts of individuals, industries and governments at all levels - though they may seem small when viewed in isolation - can make an enormous collective impact. A national commitment, involving each American, will not only lift the veil of pollution from our skies and cleanse our turbid waters, it could help propel this nation toward a new era of social amenity far transcending the proud achievements of the past.

If we act wisely and with speed, we can extract long-range social dividends from our resources as well as short term private conveniences. We can elevate the quality of life as well as expand the quantity of goods. We can set an example for the world by turning from exploitation to preservation, from growth at any cost to growth for a purpose.
