

HOW TO SAVE ON MEAT
Don't just beef about bullish meat prices. Follow these suggestions from home economists at Whirlpool Corporation to avoid paying an arm and a leg for every side of beef you buy.

Buy quality. Make sure you're buying meat that's nearly all meat, not fat, bones and gristle that will only go to waste. The Better Business Bureau believes that trim loss ranges between about 25 and 33 per cent of total weight.

Buy in quantity. Stock up on sale items, especially family favorites. Plan at least two meals ahead when you shop and buy enough meat when prices are low so that it can last for several meals. A big bit of beef can be divided and sectioned for stew, sliced for sandwiches, and subsequently frozen for later use. Or, cook more of one dish than your family can eat at one meal, and freeze the rest, to save yourself some time too.

Store it carefully. Airtight packaging is the secret of success in freezing foods. Containers and wrappings should be moisture proof and sealed securely to keep natural juices in and air out. Defrosting can be less of a sticky situation if you place two layers of freezer paper between each layer of meat. Date and label every package as you put it into your freezer, then use the oldest package first. Don't hoard your frozen food... the greater the turnover, the smaller per package operating cost. The American Meat Institute recommends maximum storage of beef from six to eight months and fresh pork, veal or ground beef three to four months.

This sort of smart shopping and proper planning should help you put your own freeze on meat prices!

Solanco Fair to Purchase 5 Acres for Fairgrounds

Solanco Fair Board got the go-ahead Thursday from Quarryville zoning hearing board to add five more acres to its fair site, and will now go ahead with purchase of a tract adjacent to the Quarryville Community Park.

The tract, which lies just south of the park, where the fair is now held, is being purchased over a 10 year period for just under $20,000 from H. Clair Eckman, 213 S. Lime St., Quarryville.

A hearing was required because the tract was zoned R-1 residential. No one attended the hearing to oppose the change.

The Solanco Fair Association had planned to erect a steel building on the property this summer, but delays have postponed construction until next year. Meanwhile, the additional five acres will be used at this year's fair for tents housing livestock and vegetable exhibits.

This will release more land for parking, according to Kenneth Rutt, fair general manager.

The fair association reportedly hopes to partially finance construction of the building with matching state funds. Rutt said the association hopes to eventually house "perishable" exhibits in the proposed building.

The fair association now rents the park for three days each year in September. It wanted to acquire the additional land in order to erect some permanent facilities.

WHEN THE HORNS WON'T STOP BLOWING

IT USUALLY IS BECAUSE EITHER THE RELAY OR THE HORN RING SWITCH HAS REMAINED CLOSED. FIRST TURN OFF IGNITION, THEN IF YOU CAN'T REMEMBER WHERE TO DISCONNECT THE HORNS REMOVE THE GROUND CABLE FROM THE BATTERY. THIS WILL STOP THE NOISE. DISCONNECTING THE WIRES AT THE HORNS WILL ALWAYS SILENCE THEM, THOUGH HORNS CAN BE DIFFICULT TO REACH.
