Schmuck, Peach Bottom, dressed for the occasion as Donald Duck. Second place went to a Guernsey calf, posing as Milky Mouse. There was a Brown Swiss masquerading as Dumbo the elephant, and an Ayrshire which was dressed like Popeye, complete with a can of spinach.

Judges for the type competition were Winslow Towle, Newton Square, who judged the colored breeds, and Paul King, Delta, who judged Holsteins. Fitting judge for both days was Robert Kessler, associate county agent in Franklin County and showmanship judge was Glenn Shirk, county agent in Chester County.

At the Lancaster District Holstein Show on Thursday, Maurice Welk of Quarryville RD2 surprised himself by walking off with the grand champion ribbon in his first year of competition. His nephew, John Welk of Pequea RD1, was the man who led the five-year-old black-and-white beauty into the showing.

Reserve champion honors went to Russell Kline, Reinholds, a 19-year-old who's well-known both in state and local Holstein competition. His four-year-old reserve animal started out as an FFA project at Ephrata High School.

Klein also showed a junior bull to capture grand champion bull honors. The reserve bull prize went to Clarence and Earl Stauffer, Ephrata RD1.

The junior champion Holstein of the show was exhibited by Linda Kauffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kauffman, Penn Spring Farms, Elizabethtown RD1. The Susan Witmer showed her brother Mark's cow to the Guernsey champion on Tuesday during the Lancaster County 4-H Dairy Show.

Reserve honors went to Diane Crider, right, who is also reigning Lancaster County Dairy Princess.

The Witmers of Willow Street dominated Brown Swiss competition at this year's Lancaster County 4-H Dairy Show held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Guernsey Sales reserve junior champion was owned by Arlen Keener, Elizabethtown RD1.

Barn. The grand champion honors went to Robert Witmer, while Linda Sue Witmer took the reserve champion prize. Both animals were two-year-old cows.

The top dairy herd of the show went to the Kauffman's Penn Spring Farms while Nate Stoltzfus, Gap, had the reserve champion herd.

The top dam and daughter was exhibited also by Stoltzfus while Trout Spring Farm, operated by John E. Kreider, Lancaster, had the reserve champion pair.

The three best females competition was taken by Blossomelle Holsteins, operated by the Herbert Royer family, 2025 Oregon Pike.

Clarence and Earl Stauffer also had the champion Holstein in the over 100,000 pounds of milk production class.

Sunny Craft Farms, operated by Earl Stauffer, had the top produce of dam, followed by the entry of Jay Melvin Brandt, Hershey RD1.
