George Mann, Tobacco Firm Owner, Dies

George S. Mann, prominent Lancaster businessman and banker, died Friday at 4:30 p.m. in Lancaster General Hospital after an illness of several hours.

Mann, trustee emeritus and former president of the board of the General Hospital, was 84.

The husband of Anna Hess Mann, he lived at 1111 Wheatland Ave.

In 1964, Mann retired after many years as owner and manager of A. K. Mann and Son Tobacco Co.

Born in Manor Township, he was a son of the late Abraham K. Mann and Elizabeth Groff Mann. He graduated from Franklin and Marshall Academy and attended Franklin and Marshall College.

He was a director for 38 years and former president of the Lancaster County National Bank. Upon his retirement as director in 1961, he was honored at a testimonial dinner at the Hamilton Club.

One of his sons, William H. Mann, a Lancaster attorney, succeeded him as a director of the bank and became the fourth generation of the Mann family connected with the bank's board.

Mann also served as a trustee of Millersville State College and headed the local draft board during World War II.

He was a member of the Hamilton Club, Rotary Club and the Pirates.

In addition to his widow, at home, Mann is survived by these children: a son, A. Kenneth Mann, Lancaster; a daughter, Anna Georgia, wife of Charles D. Sparks, Vero Beach, Fla.; a son, William H. Mann, Lancaster, and another son, Dr. Richard H. Mann, Lancaster, and another son, Dr. Richard H. Mann, Lancaster R2.

Thirteen grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren also survive.
