world's largest selection of agriculture and home economic correspondence courses.

"Attitude toward land grant colleges, agricultural research and farm groups - like cooperatives - are changing for the better," Beattie concluded. "Consumers are coming to realize that we do provide the things which are absolutely essential for life."

After the conference was over, N. Dale Detweiler, president of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives, told Lancaster Farming that the need for farmer cooperatives will never end, because no matter how big farmers get, they'll still need the services that only coop's can offer. Detweiler is personnel director and public relations officer for the Nazareth National Bank in Northampton County. For 23 years before he became a banker, Detweiler was in charge of the Northampton County Farm Bureau.

"We cannot forget," Detweiler said, "that the existence of coop's is sanctioned by the public. What we need to do, though, is to educate the public about the aims and objectives of the coops. That's part of the reason we called this conference. We needed to get the coop leaders, the Penn State people and the vo-ag teachers together to talk about these problems."

Dr. James Beattie, Dean of Agriculture at Penn State, told a farm cooperative meeting in Lancaster on Tuesday that he sees a change for the better in public attitudes towards farming and farm related businesses.

Director education is also a challenge which the PAFC plans to meet head on, Detweiler said. "The problems they had at the Lehigh Coop are a good example of the kind of thing a good educational program might help avoid. The directors there simply did not ask the right kinds of questions. So we'd like the university to set up some kind of program to help coop directors learn the things they should be looking for in balance sheets and operating statements.

"Many directors who are elected to cooperative boards have never been involved in any policy making body before. Sometimes this lack of experience can lead to bad mistakes, not just by big cooperatives, but by small ones as well," Detweiler concluded.
