

Park Myers, a partner in the Black and White Sales Barn, Lancaster, is shown here with two of the Farm Show baby beef steers bought by local firms. Black and White bought the Angus, owned by Ken Brubaker, while Lancaster Farming bought the Hereford, owned by Ken's sister, Sarah.

Local Firms Buy Show Steers

Lancaster Farming and the Black and White Holstein Farm, Lancaster, were among the area concerns who helped to support local youths in their baby beef efforts at the Pennsylvania Farm Show this year.

The newspaper bought the steer shown by Sarah Brubaker, 2418 Harrisburg Pike, Lancaster. The 1185-pound Hereford placed third in its class at the Farm Show, and brought 47-cents a pound in the auction ring last Friday.

Sarah's brother, Ken, sold his steer to the sales barn for 50-cents a pound. His 1170 pound Angus placed fifth in its class during Farm Show competition.

Commenting on the purchases, Park Myers, a partner at Black and White, said, "I think it's a good thing for local businesses to support the work these kids are doing. Next year I'd like to see even more steers coming back to Lancaster County."

Among the largest purchasers of Farm Show steers was Lancaster Packing Co., Lancaster. The firm reportedly bought close to 30 steers for its own and other accounts. Lancaster the buyer of the grand Packing was the agent for champion animal.

Poultrymen Banquet Set

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation announced plans recently for a totally new and different Annual Fund Raising Banquet. Changes include a new date, a new site, and a new format, all of which should give poultrymen in Pennsylvania and surrounding states an exceptional evening; and one that may well become a traditional social gathering for the industry. Plans include a seven piece orchestra for dining and dancing, awarding of valuable door prizes, a live stage show, and the appearance of well known figures within the industry. Details of these plans regarding the change in format will be made known over the next several months.

This year's Annual Fund Raising Banquet, the principal means by which industry and allied industries support the Federation, will be held on March 19, 1975, at the Host Inn, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Supporters of the Banquet will be recognized by both a program distributed the night of the Banquet and a special edition of the Federation's Newsletter, its regular publication to members. All in all, it adds up to a big night on the town for Pennsylvania poultrymen.
