Service, will include a general session disciplining the preschooler, presented by James VanHorn, Family Living Specialist at The Pennsylvania State University. Participants will then select two of four workshops offered: how to develop creativity in the preschooler; how to select preschool educational programs; managing with a iunior consumer; children and television.

Discussion sessions will include "learn by doing" activities for parents. In addition, education exhibits relating to preschoolers will be on display and handout

Anne Hinkle, Extension Home Economist, Lancaster County, says that the preschool years are the important ones in setting the stage for a child's future learning. She urges county parents of preschoolers to attend this program. For those parents wishing to bring their small children, a nursery and babysitting service will be provided at the meeting location for 30 children at the cost of $1.00 per child. Babysitting services must be confirmed by phone because of the limited space available.
