Zero - PIONEER OF FARM BULK MILK COOLERS

Peggy Schott, Lebanon R5, poses for a picture with Sadie, a purebred Nubian Goat. Goat fanciers are invited to join in a tour of Amyr Farms with a group leaving from Lebanon.

Dairy Goat Tour Slated

While everyone knows that man's best friend is his dog - the dairy goat might be a rival for the position.

Why would anyone want a goat? To begin with goats are clean, intelligent, and affectionate animals. They make excellent pets for the entire family. In addition to being personable, goats also are a very practical pet. A goat can thought of as a small cow. The feeding and management are similar, but the goat's smaller size makes her easier to handle. The goat's size also makes her attractive to people with only a small amount of land who could not keep a cow. Two goats properly managed could provide an adequate supply of milk for an average family. Most people cannot distinguish any difference in flavor between goat and cow's milk. Goat's milk is excellent for the making of cheese, yogurt and butter. There are people unable to drink cow's milk that can drink goat's milk. The reason goat's milk is more digestible is due to the fat particles. The fat particles in goat's milk are softer and smaller than the fat particles of cow's milk.

The goat is a ruminant (four stomachs). It chews a cud much the same as a cow and has an udder with two teats unlike a cow. A goat is milked for 305 days then dries up to build reserves for the two to three kids she will have approximately 60 days later. The gestation period is 150 days.

Goats can give from four to eight pounds of milk per day which is two to four quarts.

While cows are certainly the mainstay of the dairy industry, goats are a feasible alternative to producing the milk supply for a family with a small amount of land.

The Lebanon County Cooperative Extension Service is extending an invitation to all persons interested in goats to attend a tour of the Amyr Farm of Oxford on Wednesday, June 18th. The Amyr Farm is well-known for their goat herd. Included in the tour will be their milking facilities, care of goats, and tips on showing and fitting dairy goats for a show. Transportation will be a car pool leaving from the Municipal Building the evening of June 18th at 5:30 p.m. Interested persons should call the Extension Office at 273-3748 by Monday, June 16th.

Here Is What The PRO-SIL Users Have To Say About PRO-SIL

Jim Weicksel
R.D. 1, Christiana, PA

JIM SAYS, "My cattle peaked between 4 and 5 lbs. better than before. Persistency level ran 2½ percent higher than DHIA average figures"

BILL CRACUS NORM MYER
RON ROMIG
Seven Oaks Farms
R D 1, Chester Springs, PA

BILL SAYS, "Our Pro-Sil treated corn silage came out of a trench better preserved and better conditioned than the regular corn silage that came out of an upright. The preservation was terrific. Our beef cattle had no shelter in an open feedlot all year and the herd health was outstanding. The palatability is excellent and we never had any trouble getting steers to clean it up."

PETER ALECXHI
Herr's Fruit Farm
R.D.1, Mountville, PA

PETE SAYS, "I'm very happy with Pro-Sil. I have already increased my order 30 percent for this fall over last year. Just sold some of my steers fattened on Pro-Sil for top dollar. The flavor is excellent."
