Weather Delays Market Opening

Old man weather has forced a change in the opening date of the open air farmers market at the Farm Show parking lot.

Instead of opening on July 8 as originally planned, the market will now open Tuesday, July 15, officials of the Open Air Farm Market Association have announced. Hours will be from 4 to 9:30 p.m.

It seems the weather hasn't been hot enough to make sweet corn mature by July 8 and those in charge of the market wanted homegrown sweet corn for the opening day.

Bona fide farmers from 10 counties (Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Luzerne, Montour, Perry, Schuylkill and Snyder) will bring produce to the market. They will sell from truck tailgates.

In addition to sweet corn, products for sale will include red beets, zucchini, summer squash, string beans, cabbage, cucumbers, onion, tomatoes, lettuce, celery and homebaked bread and pies. There will also be two refrigerated trucks with a full line of meats and cheese.

The market has the blessing of State Agriculture Secretary Jim McHale, long an advocate of farmers taking an active role in direct marketing.

"It gives the farmer a break by offering him a larger share of the food profit and helps the consumer by giving him an opportunity to buy farm fresh food," Secretary McHale said.
