Don't store gasoline

Some people may try to beat the rising prices by storing large amounts of gasoline. However, they may create more problems than they solve by doing so.

The gasoline stored on a farm or around a house becomes an expensive convenience if the storage period is longer than six months.

First, the fuel contains a blend of several parts, one of which is extremely volatile and provides engines with easy starting. It evaporates rapidly. When the storage tank is exposed to the sun, most of this ingredient is lost in about 60 days.

Secondly, gas becomes gummy — similar to shellac — after it "ages". This gum may stop up the carburetor and cause engine deposits. It also may cause damage when mixed in small amounts with fresh gasoline.

In addition, seasonal changes in grades of gasoline spell trouble if fuel blended for one season is carried over in storage tanks until another season. Summer grade fuel may cause hard starting during cold weather.
