Proper insurance coverage is a changing item these days and all real estate owners, and especially farmers, are urged to give some attention to their coverage. Prices are constantly on the upswing and to cover the original cost of a building is surely not enough; it's the replacement cost that should be covered as much as possible. Owners are urged to contact their insurance agent to check on the extent of their current coverage. Also, liability insurance is a very important thing and all farmers or employers should carry this coverage on their help and on others coming on their premises. Proper insurance is a definite part of good farm management and of general safe living in the seventies.

Hoping they got a lot of bull for their money are Robert Shore and Charles Myers who reportedly purchased this Holstein sire for $280,000. The championship bull, a son of Romandale Reflection Marquis, was purchased by Shore of Ontario, Canada, and Myers of Lancaster last Monday at the Hendricks County Fairgrounds, Indiana. The price is believed to be one of the highest sums ever paid for a bull. The 10-year old animal was among 10 bulls and 440 cows and heifers offered for sale at the Bottema Farms Memorial Sale, conducted by Hays Farms International of Ontario.

During the current agricultural administration at Harrisburg we have heard considerable about the value of agricultural research, and in many instances how it has been knocked and deflated. However, research is still badly needed and is a very valuable guide to future world food supplies. In the past, agricultural research has helped the 5 percent of farmers in this country feed the other 95 per cent; plus, millions in other countries.

Dr. Jim Beattie, Dean of the College of Agriculture at Penn State, feels that continued research will help our country continue to lead the world in food production.
