Jane's home was stucco and very open inside "with hardly any walls." It was decorated with much Greek and oriental furnishings.

One interesting aspect of another culture is the food and Jane said, "The food there was very different." Breakfast in her host family was a simple meal, consisting of either yoghurt or black bread (which was white) and butter.

The largest meal was at noon. Jane said, "We hardly ever ate meat. There were casseroles with noodles, pizza ple crusts with fruit or pastry with little pieces of meat, and there was always a salad." The ingredients for the meal were always fresh because Jane said her host mother went marketing every morning.

The evening meal was again a simple one with things like cheese fondue or luncheon meat and cheese, always prettily rolled up. And of course, there was bread.

Eating itself was different. Jane said, "They use both hands. They don't keep one hand in their lap. Once I got used to it it was easier and I really enjoyed it.

Food generally was quite expensive, Jane said. An ice cream sundae cost $2.00 and their delicious chocolate was also expensive. Jane claimed to have been really fond of both, and admits to gaining five pounds on her visit.

Clothing and housing also seemed expensive, Jane said. "It was rare to see anyone building a house." The young people wore a lot of blue jeans but a pair could cost as much as $29.00. Because clothing was so high Jane said, "They had fewer clothes but of very high quality."

Jane found the youth "more mature than here. There was no problem making friends. They came and really made me feel at home. They went out of their way to be friendly.'

As for dating, it is not done as early as here. They don't drive until age 18. "They don't seem to have experimental dates. When they do start dating it is likely to be with the same person for a long time." Jane said they are also older when they get married, but financially it is cheaper not to get married at all, and finding housing is difficult. Jane said. "there is not the pressure of finding boy friends."

Jane felt the exchange trip had changed her somewhat. "It made me appreciate the United States more. We take so much for granted. We live so well here. But I did like the way they live. There is less pressure about what to wear and less social pressure. I learned to accept people for what they are."

Jane highly recommends the YFU program and says she has one sister who already wants to go abroad. "It is so much better than just traveling. You learn the culture was just beautiful." Jane is one of a growing number of youth who are fortunate enough to experience life in another country. The YFU literature explains that one purpose of the program is to start "conversations." The many conversations which have been started must be opening up whole new horizons for our neighbors in the world community.

and the people. And that's why I really enjoyed it."

Society 8

Farm Women's Society 8 met in the home of Mrs. Patsy Warfel, 812 W. Main St., Mount Joy, Sept. 20, at 2 p.m. Mrs. Grace Bixler, was in charge of the meeting. Group singing was led by Miss Anna Mae Eby. Rev. Robert Murphy, pastor of the Donegal Presbyterian Church was the special speaker.

Miss Mary Grace Martin was in charge of devotional time. She read from Ps. 104 and also several original poems about autum. Numerous healthy suggestions came from the ladies in response to Roll Call. Thirty members and two visitors were present. Notes and expressions of appreciation for flowers given while in the hospital were given by Grace Bixler and Ruth Musser during her time of breavement. Mrs. Mary Reist also expressed thanks for flowers.

The Ways and Means Committee will be responsible for a stand at Homemakers Day Nov. 13., at the Farm and Home Center. Mrs. Kathryn Erb reported on the entertainment of guests at Conestoga View in Aug. Wed Oct. 1., is the date for sewing at the General Hospital.

Officers elected were Recording Secretary; Miss Mary Grace Martin; Asst. Sec. Mrs. Martin K Miller; Corresponding Sec. Mrs Alice Myers; Treasurer Mrs Sylvester Shuman.

The next meeting will be held in the Chiques United Methodist Church, Mount Joy, R2 Society 25 will be entertained and Lester Hostetter will be speaking on "CHRYSANTHEMUMS"
