

Senator Scott tours area farm

Talks to Newsmen

During the press conference, Senator Scott denied reports that he would soon be named as the ambassador to China. The Senator did explain that he had talked to the president about ambassadorships but had recommended George Bush for the appointment. "Unless sources know more than I," the Senator stated, he would be taking the position.

When asked if he would be running for office next year, the Senator noted that although the definite decision had not been made, he had set up an office in Erie. He told the newsmen to "wait and see."

Speaking on the failure of some unions to allow grain to be loaded for Russia, the Senator, explained that boycotting could only hurt the detents. He also stated that long term agreements for both the European countries and Russia for grains would be the best alternative.

During his remarks at the banquet later in the day, the Senator noted his concern over the natural gas situation for this winter. Naming Pa. as the 6th worst state for shortages, Senator Scott, commented on the concern that this might cause for heating. The Senator recommended lifting price controls and encouraging intrastate trade for the natural material.

Sees Beef Cattle

Although rain hampered the Senator's tour of the Wenger farm, the Republican leader, did visit the barn to view a sampling of the Wenger's beef animals. Posing with the
