

Maryland 4-H'ers recognized

Seven of Maryland's 24 teen-agers attending the 54th National 4-H Congress recently (Nov. 30 - Dec. 4) in Chicago were sponsored by business firms and organizations which operate totally or to a large extent in the Old Line State. The other 17 were guests of national 4-H program sponsors. Young persons making the trip to the snow-blown Windy City as guests of Maryland 4-

H program supporters included two prospective legal secretaries, a fledgling nurseryman, equestrian instructor, would-be restaurant operator, Maryland's reigning lamb and wool queen, and an aspiring special education teacher. They are as follows: Katherine D. ("Kay") Hoffman, 19, of Ridgely. Miss Hoffman was recognized for her

"achievement in dairy" activities. Her trip was sponsored by Southern States Cooperative, Inc., a five-state farm supply organization headquartered at Richmond, Va. During her 4-H career, Miss Hoffman has acquired her own 15-cow purebred Jersey herd, and she has won championship honors at local, state and regional dairy cattle shows, both in breed competition and in fitting and showing. She is now a sophomore at Weley College in Dover, Del., studying to be a legal secretary. Sharon Jones, 18, of Maryland. Miss Jones was recognized for her 4-H poultry activities. Her trip was also sponsored by Southern States Cooperative, Inc.

She has had 4-H broiler projects for nine years, and she was a member of the Queen Annes county team which placed third in senior 4-H poultry and egg judging at this year's Maryland State Fair in Timonium. A 1975 high school graduate, she is currently combining her broiler-growing and other 4-H activities with a full-time job as a secretary in a law office on historic Lawyers Row in Centreville.

Anthony ("Tony") Nonn, 18, of Appleton. Nonn was recognized for his "plan and plant for horticultural beauty" 4-H activities. His trip was sponsored by the Maryland State Fair Board.

Nonn is a participant in his family's small nursery operation, a junior leader of the countywide 4-H horticulture club, and assistant coach for the county 4-H horticulture judging teams. The county's junior team, incidentally, placed fifth in its division at this year's Maryland State Fair in Timonium. A graduate of Elkton high school, Nonn is currently a freshman at Cecil Community College.

Mary Areta Bradley, 18, of Port Deposit was recognized for her 4-H horse and pony activities. Her trip, too, was sponsored by the Maryland State Fair Board.

A 1975 graduate of St. Mark's high school at Newark, Del., Miss Bradley is now a riding instructor at her family's acreage between Rising Sun and Port Deposit. She is a junior leader for the North East Kuntry Kids 4-H horse club, and she has helped to train the county's 4-H horse judging teams.

Danny Frey, 19, of Hagerstown. He was recognized for his "achievement in foods" 4-H activities. Like the two Cecil county residents, his trip was sponsored by the Maryland State Fair Board.

A nonfarm rural resident of the Beaver Creek area east of Hagerstown, young Frey learned to cook at the age of 9 to help aid a family situation where both mother and father worked outside the home. His two brothers also help with preparing meals. Frey is a second-year student in food service and management at Hagerstown Community College. He has aspirations for one day owning and operating a restaurant with a unique system of reservations and menus highlighting every state in the U.S.

Susan E. Schley, 19, of Myersville. Miss Schley is the reigning Maryland lamb and wool queen. She was recognized for her 4-H activities in the area of recreation. Her trip was sponsored by the Maryland 4-H Foundation.

Highlights of her 4-H career have included several years as a counselor at the regular Frederick county 4-H camp sessions, as well as being a counselor at the "Poppy" camp and 7 and 8-year-olds. She is currently a second-year nursing student at Frederick Community College.

Annette M Cavey, 18, a resident of the Centennial Estates area west of Ellicott City. Miss Cavey was recognized for her 4-H citizenship activities. Her trip was sponsored by the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company.

Highlights of her 4-H career have included a large amount of volunteer work among children with learning and physical handicaps. She is currently a freshman at the University of Maryland in College Park, majoring in special education.

More American teen-age girls are having babies than ever before, reports The National Foundation - March of Dimes. Good prenatal care is especially important for these young mothers, says the MOD, because they are more likely to have complications of pregnancy and dead or damaged infants.
