

Agriculture Day

is something almost everyone in agriculture has been looking for," says NAMA Executive Director Ernest T. Marshall "NAMA helps provide materials to participate and encourages everyone to work together for the greatest impact on the same day March 22 - throughout the nation.

Last year, NAMA-prepared promotional materials, including 130,000 brochures, 8,500 school lesson plans and 60,000 coloring books, were distributed in 38 states. Features about Ag Day were carried by major newspapers, wire services, radio and television stations. Thousands of school children, city residents and consumer groups visited farms or participated in special Ag Day programs.

Ag Day 1975, proved there's a tremendous interest in American agriculture, and an even greater eagerness on the part of ag interests to get the facts out - straight.

But lots of willing participants don't have the resources to generate communications materials and programs suitable for telling such a complex story effectively. (Which helps explain why NAMA received requests for Ag Day materials from 38 states last year.)

The need for continuing, clear-cut communications between urban and rural Americans won't diminish.
