ANCA membership drive underway

DENVER, Co. — Some 2,000 members of the American National Cattlemen's Association will assume the role of modern "Minuteman," as they participate in an extensive membership campaign in the near future.

The goal, according to Merlyn Carlson, Lodgepole, Neb., Chairman of the Membership and Finance Committee of ANCA, is to enlist more than 3,000 new members by July 4. The "Minuteman" idea, utilizing the Spirit of '76 Bicentennial theme, was announced during the annual ANCA convention in Phoenix in January.

The "Spirit of 76" membership campaign runs from Feb. 1 to July 4, with added emphasis on April 19. That date is significant, since on April 19, 1775, the first battle was fought by Minutemen, at Concord.

In explaining the Minuteman idea, Carlson said, "The combined individual efforts of the original Minutemen in Revolutionary War times helped bring independence to this great country. When we considered the valuable role of an individual, motivated to service on a minute's notice, we could think of nothing more appropriate than to involve the nation's cattlemen in a membership program to support our cattle industry."

Furthermore, the Minuteman theme is appropriate in that we are asking each participating ANCA member to take only a few minutes of his own time and enlist at least one other cattleman as a member of the Association. With all of the pressures on our industry from government, organized labor, consumer activist groups and environmentalist groups, we certainly feel the need for a strong organization speaking for all cattlemen."

Carlson added that "just to continue present programs at ANCA will require a broader membership base. The consequences of not achieving our goal will be a cut-back in ANCA effectiveness as a national spokesman for the beef cattle industry."

National Coordinator of the "Minuteman" membership drive is Tom Landers, of Hot Springs, S.D. Landers will work with state coordinators, and within each state, area coordinators will work directly with individual ANCA members who volunteered to ask friends and neighbors to join ANCA.

Fruits-vegetables
get market boost

HARRISBURG - Locally grown fruits and vegetables may be more in demand these days as distant suppliers find it difficult to compete with ever rising transportation and energy costs.

This optimistic appraisal for Pennsylvania growers was expressed recently at the third annual Produce Marketing Conference conducted by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Agriculture Secretary Raymond J. Kerstetter told the gathering that increasing transportation, energy and labor costs were beginning to reverse a trend set years ago when eastern wholesale buyers turned to the large western suppliers for plentiful, low-cost produce.

"Now," said Kerstetter, "the wholesale buyers are finding that costs of bringing in produce from the west are steadily climbing. I think we can look forward to a revival of produce production in the east to help meet the needs of the megalopolis stretching from Boston to Washington and points south."

One wholesale buyer at the conference noted that a truckload of western apples now cost him $2.20 a box in hauling charges, while in-state apples can be hauled to his warehouse for as little as thirty cents a box.

Another buyer, who also attested to increasing transportation costs, added that the designation "Pennsylvania grown" is finding great consumer appeal.

Producers and growers at the conference also noted that fresh produce was selling better than the processed varieties. This was attributed to a "back to nature" trend in which consumers want "to get back to basics in food..."
